

Alliteration and rhyming

Two words are said to alliterate if they begin with the same sequence of consonant sounds. For example, “shrink” and “shred” alliterate.

Two words are said to rhyme if they end with the same sequence of sounds, beginning at the vowel of the last stressed syllable.

Give two words that alliterate and also rhyme, without being identical. (Yes, this is possible!)